Subject: Concern about food handling at

Feedback: I feel like I should bring this to your attention. I was getting a sandwich today at the cafeteria from the attendant whose name tag looked like it said During the time she was making the sandwich, she reached down with her gloved hands and was pickup up items from the floor. Then she proceeded to get the lettuce out of the sandwich bar for my sandwich with the same gloves that were just touching the floor. I asked her to change her gloves before proceeding to make my sandwich which she did, however she put the lettuce that she touched with the contaminated gloves, back with the rest of the lettuce because I refused to take the contaminated lettuce. Having previously worked in the food safety industry, I know that people can potentially get very sick from improper food handling especially when touching the floor with the same gloves that they then use on the clean food.
